Elks and RCMP assemble child ID kits

Kevin Vink/MVP Staff

BY KEVIN VINK
MVP Staff

The Didsbury Elks, along with the Didsbury RCMP, held their second child fingerprinting and portrait event last Thursday, June 20.

The event, which is provided as a free service to residents, gives pertinent information in case a child should go missing, explained Margo Ward, publicity director for the club.

She noted though this is the second time the Elks have held an event like this, it will likely not be the last.

The lodge purchases fingerprint and photo kits from the Victims of Violence Canadian Centre for Missing Children, and Ward added that the kits are given to parents for safekeeping, and that none of the information goes into any sort of database.

Though the Elks have provided the same kits in the past, the club members thought about doing it themselves this year, first as a way to measure how many people actually complete the kits, but also when the RCMP are printing children, they can scrutinize the prints and ensure that they are usable, she said.

"So it's wonderful for them to come out, because we've had some very young ones come out this time and they're very hard to do," said Ward.

"We have the opportunity to get the kits every year, so we just decided this year we are going to try and cover the town to get as many children as possible done, so we're supplying the kits and photos at no cost to the public," she added.

Elks members and RCMP accepted any children under the age of six, and there were even some parents who brought infants to the event.

"The registered kit includes fingerprints and pictures and information about the child, so if they are taken or lost, parents have all the information the RCMP require," she said.

The Elks are thinking of hosting another event in September when the word has gotten out, and the time lapse will also allow for families who move in over the summer to be made aware of the program, she said. "We will have new kids moving into town, and we do newborn to age six, so you know there'll be new babies and children who the parents felt the infant was too small now, or ones who are starting into kindergarten and playschool," she said, noting that they have advertised to the kindergarten and playschools in town to get the word out.

She thinks the program is useful and has had her kids done in the past. "Didsbury is a very safe community, so it's not so much what happens here. But if they go camping or travel, all sorts of things could happen that we don't want to happen. But if they do, then parents have the information they need."

When children are in strange surroundings, they tend to trust any adult who seems to look like a good person, and especially when they are younger, she said that children don't always know not to talk to strangers.

The RCMP recommend getting kids done again when they get older, but Ward noted that fingerprints themselves don't often change, other than getting bigger as the children grow, which means the kits are good until the photos become outdated.

Rural Ride for Dad wraps up at ZEMC

KEVIN VINK
MVP Staff

Though having 185 bikers roll into town may scare some people, the Rural Ride for Dad is doing nothing but good, as they raised $35,000 in rider pledges and toured the region, coming to a stop in Didsbury on Saturday, June 22.

Garry Janz, President of the Ride for Dad, said, "We had an amazing turnout. This thing's growing so quickly - it's amazing."

The ride, which raises money for research in, and to raise awareness of prostate cancer, started in the year 2000 with 80 bikes in one event, to a staggering 40 events across Canada, with a total of $10 million raised through the years, he said.

Janz noted that the money raised all stays in the area where it was raised, so the $35,000 that was raised in rider pledges through the Rural Ride for Dad will be staying in Alberta and going directly to the researchers here in the province.

"We have over 3,000 volunteers across the country. It's mind-boggling and very humbling. We have a lot of fun doing it too," he added.

Dean Harper, chair of the Rural Ride for Dad, said that the wrap-up at the Zion Evangelical Missionary Church included the group that started in Red Deer and toured that region, as well as the group that started in Olds, a total of about 200 riders.

Though one bike went down during the ride, both the rider and his wife got right back on and finished the tour.

Noel West/MVP Staff

The ride, which included routes through the Drumheller and Red Deer areas, raised $35,000. Nationally, Ride-related activities have brought in $130,000 for prostate cancer awareness and research. Area pharmacist nets provincial award

BY KEVIN VINK
MVP Staff

The owner of the Didsbury and Carstairs Pharmasaves, Jody Keller, recently received the annually-awarded M.J. Huston Pharmacist of Distinction award from Alberta Pharmacy Excellence (APEX), offered through the Alberta Pharmacists' Association and Alberta

College of Pharmacists. He attended the award ceremony with his immediate family in Edmonton on Saturday, June 15.

The award is given out to pharmacists in Alberta who have demonstrated outstanding professional excellence in the practice of pharmacy, he noted, adding that he does things a little differently than many pharmacists.

"I work really hard to make my staff better, to allow them to provide better patient outcomes, better customer service, attention to detail, and truly invest in our staff to help better our community and help our patients' care," said Keller.

He also exposes himself to more progressive and risky opportunities than traditional pharmacies, he added, such as investing in therapeutic lifestyle programs, medical equipment rentals, as well as a compounding facility.

Compounding, he explained, is the art of making a dosage form or medication from scratch.

"So a doctor will order a special or unique - not commercially available - product and we actually make it with raw chemicals," he said.

He said there are probably only 25-30 compounding facilities in the province, where some are aimed more at mass production and others, like his, are smaller-scale operations.

Pharmasave staff get trained in compounding when Keller sends them to either London, Ont. or Huston, Tex., for a four-day course, and they also get ongoing training through the Internet and company representatives that come through, he said.

This allows his businesses to provide unique dosages and also allows them to eliminate allergens or problematic ingredients that are included in some manufactured products.

His staff have all been receptive to the training, but the difficult part, he said, is that doctors have to be aware of the service when writing the prescriptions, though the compounding facility has been worthwhile overall.

He was nominated for the award by a collection of individuals from various medical professions - such as chiropractors, physicians, nurses and regional pharmacy representatives - as well as patients and staff, and he discussed what the award means to him.

"After 17 years in my occupation of pharmacy, I'm overwhelmed that I was chosen out of the numerous quality and outstanding pharmacists in the province - there's over 4,000," he noted.

"It's a great deal of satisfaction that I have chosen an occupation that personally suits me well and I'm able to provide quality of care that not only my colleagues but my patients deem worthy as well."

He almost can't believe that he was chosen, he added.

"We supported it with the work that I've done but to actually have it decided amongst the two associations and assess the quality of applicants and choose me, I think it's really humbling," he said.

One of the reasons he enjoys working in a small-town setting, he said, is because of the relationships he forms with his clients, and getting to know them on a first-name basis.

"And being able to improve their quality of lives and be trusted advisors for them, and then in my role of developing and implementing programs, seeing them through and seeing how my staff can benefit from positive workflows and their relationships with our customers and provide a quality of care that we're really proud of," he said.

Albertans will come together

As Calgary and large tracts of southern Alberta start the recovery and cleanup from the largest and most expensive natural disaster ever seen in this province, residents in West Central Alberta can be ever so thankful that their communities have been spared the carnage.

DAN SINGLETON

Anyone viewing the photos and video of the damage and ruin caused in Calgary, Canmore, High River and elsewhere cannot but help feel great sympathy for the people who have lost their homes, property and businesses – and in a few tragic cases, their very lives.

"The magnitude is just extraordinary. It is stunning," said Prime Minister Stephen Harper.

"I never imagined we could have a flood of this magnitude in this country. Until you really see it in person you don't get a sense (that) this is an incredible event."

Although flooding of the Red Deer forced the evacuation of hundreds of residents in Sundre and elsewhere in Mountain View and Red Deer counties, the emergency in this region was certainly minor compared to things further south.

As with the floods that hit Alberta hard in 2005, this great flood of 2013 will have many lessons to offer – not the least of which is the absolute proof that preparation for disasters is key to meeting emergency challenges.

For example, taking the lessons learned in 2005, firefighters, EMS personnel, municipal officials in Sundre, Mountain View and Red Deer counties were very quick to set up emergency response centres once the danger became imminent.

Hours before the river peaked in Sundre, for example, the Town of Sundre's emergency operations centre was up and running, bringing together all the various emergency responders and their controllers.

And because of those quick and thorough actions, seniors, schoolchildren, hospital patients and other residents kept out of danger in what could have been a very dangerous situation.

Being prepared for the emergency of 2013 required preparations and training that began eight years ago, immediately after the flood of 2005.

Looking to the future, all stakeholders, and politicians in particular, should know that while natural disasters can be few and far between, that can never been an excuse for 'cutting corners' when it comes to long-term emergency preparedness.

Albertans will no doubt see their way through this latest natural disaster as they have in the past – and politicians at all levels should know that Albertans will expect them to put aside their differences and work for the community at large.

As in 2005, a very large part of the thanks for bringing the province through this latest natural disaster should and must go to Alberta's brave and tireless emergency responders.

Letter to the Editor

Build it and they will come?

Field of Dreams was a very good movie with the legendary movie star Kevin Costner. I was truly swept away.

Mayor and council members made it sound good at the time when "they showed us the way" in our elaborate sequel "Shantz Crossing". I was blown away at the efficiency of execution. I mean several questionable real estate transactions and economic development projects mayor and council members were advised against, passed in record time. Yes.... advised against by development consulting firms we hired...actually they hired...we paid! Salary increases...passed in record time! Send delegates to the Orient to find our sister city, how sweet! Moved I was.

Who does that? Mostly... Why? Mayor and council members, if you don't like what the Shantz development report says, it still means no! In simple "inglish" more discussion, or a referendum... that last word (referendum) means everyone in town tells the elected official specifically what the elected official will do, or will be mandated to do next. Legally with a vote saying yes or no.

Fact: Democracy is a term sometimes used to describe a political mandate of elected officials to act as town citizens instructs them.

It's not hard really, you end up looking like the mayor of the most democratic town in Alberta. Popularity polls soar... Tee-hee-hee-heeOooops. Witnessing recent leadership actions, our officials are acting against the civic mandates. Last time I checked... it was called a (PC Party) dictatorship.

A substantial portion of our town residents openly opposed this blatant disregard of our civic process... yet here we are... with a mud pit waiting for a poop processor... nice!

Fact: Didsbury real estate values are +/- $50,000 less than Carstairs, Olds, Innisfail. Calgary and Red Deer, houses sell in hours. Let's see why? Oh... wait I know, I know, I know... no one wants to live in a poop palace!

I believe it's time to make lemonade. Send council the final message. Stop acting like all-knowing gods. Do what you are elected to do, before this costs you more than a red face. Civic duty to our community's stability should be more important than personal ego or economic computer Sims because neither relate to reality. That is why we want an audit.

Fact: Industry will show up one day in our neighbourhood when the transport costs are lower than anywhere else or we whore ourselves out, give them land, low taxes, for very few jobs and by this method only, will we increase their corporate profits...

Point to consider: a poop processor should be an option because that means that all the other industrial centres don't want. Let's take a moment and think. Why?

Seriously! Why do banks have a tough time approving mortgages in Didsbury?

Hum, think, think, think. That is a tough question; do you think it's the economy?

That is why we want an audit.

I wanted to live and retire here because there was no heavy industry...I could have moved to Crossfield. At the time I would have paid less...yet here I am. Let's make lemonade...before we start sucking on lemons! With enough knowledge and experience to see if we (as united citizens of Didsbury) can wake up the social dragon that I would call cooperation against elected corruption. And...yes that is why we still want an audit.

I personally believe an improvement in attitudes will result when citizens are factalized without interference from special interest groups. When we are exposed to facts we become more respectful and tolerant of our differences. Therefore become more cooperative.

An aging population is upon us. That unprecedented growth in population is where our complete stability lies. New vocations in elderly care, facilities based on recreation to attract the stable retirees will be our new sources of income. This vast industry will burgeon soon and I would hate to miss this opportunity. Can we at least put the "Dog before the cart"? And...don't forget the audit.

Our veteran or aspiring politicians should weigh their moral fibre more carefully. Remember that charity begins at home. The ripple effect is magnified through your immediate circle (you reap what you sow). The benefits act to stabilize our community and survival. Therefore creating the pre-eminent retirement centre in Alberta, which I see we could be.

Southridge residents present to council

Delegation brings up concerns regarding basement flooding due to sewage line maintenance

KEVIN VINK
MVP Staff

A delegation of Southridge Crescent residents came to talk to town council to discuss some issues regarding life in the crescent at the meeting on May 28.

The delegation led by Teresa Lounsbury brought up a number of concerns, including thoughts on the water main break that took place in February, and repeated problems with sewage backflows flooding basements.

She noted that at least one of the flooding incidents can be traced back to public works staff pressurizing the sewage pipe to clear blockages in a slump in the line.

Lounsbury said she has had so many insurance claims for floods that her provider is threatening to not cover another incident, so she asked town council to help cover her deductible.

In reply to the request, Mayor Brian Wittal said that the town could not do such a thing, as that would set a dangerous precedent for the town.

Karen Henry, manager of planning and infrastructure for the town, said that public works staff have been periodically clearing out those pipes since the slump was discovered, and she noted that the water and sewage rehabilitation work scheduled to take place in Southridge this summer will address that issue.

Wittal said that backflow preventers may have prevented the flooding, and that the residents could look at installing them to prevent future problems.

The problem is that in those slump areas the solids build up and settle, plugging the pipe, he said.

"So in a preventative way, what the town did, once or twice a year, maintenance goes in to flush that area, blow that stuff out and get it moving down the pipe so that (backups) wouldn't happen," he added.

"But when that's done, of course there's pressure put through the line and what happened is it pressured back into people's homes, and if they didn't have backflow preventer valves, then that pressure would unfortunately push sewage back into the basements."

He admitted there have been communications issues between town staff and residents, but noted the town cannot be held responsible for the floods.

If town staff had let residents know ahead of time, they may have been able to prepare beforehand, check for faulty backflow valves, and replace or install them if necessary, he said.

Career High grad

BY KEVIN VINK
MVP Staff

The Didsbury Career High School held its awards ceremony during lunch on Monday, June 17.

There were three awards given to students, a citizenship award, work experience award, and dedicated student award, said Ruth Hall, administrative support for the school.

"We select students who do the best in work experience for the year, then the citizenship award goes to whoever gave back to the community and showed the most significant improvement over the year," said Hall.

"And the dedicated student is basically the one who was the most committed and spent the most time at school."

She said it was a good, busy year, with 13 graduates and 120 total students attending throughout the year.

"And we had our grad ceremony on May 30 at the Olds Legion, and we do a grad ceremony there together with Olds Career High School, and then we have a supper followed by a cap and gown ceremony," she added.

Though some of the students are still high school age, she noted there are many adults who use the school to upgrade previous courses.

Cellular service disruption

BY KEVIN VINK
MVP Staff

Many Telus and Bell cellular customers had a rough week last week, as service levels in Mountain View County were spotty at best and non-existent at worst.

Chris Gerritsen, an Alberta spokesman for Telus, said that the problems were due to a lease expiring for one of their towers in the area.

Because the lease expired, crews had to install a new tower in a different location, leading to the interruptions, he said, noting that service was back to normal midway through the week.

Children's book launch a success

BY KEVIN VINK
MVP Staff

Children's author Alan 'Lanny' Chambers and illustrator Elsie Archer held a book launch for Chambers' debut book, The Starfish, at the Didsbury Municipal Library on Saturday, June 15.

The launch attracted about 80 to 90 people, according to Chambers, and included people of all ages, from toddlers to seniors.

"I thought it went very well," said Chambers.

"It was packed. A lot of people had to work, as it was Father's Day the next day, but we had a good turnout and it went very well."

Archer, a local artist, created the illustrations for the book using a technique called suminagashi, and she got to showcase her work and was available - along with Chambers - for book signings after the launch.

The story involves a little girl named Saylor, he said, who decides to save a starfish from drying out on the beach.

After this, she becomes embroiled in a dream within a dream, wherein she experiences some of the colourful and vivid life in the sea, where she learns that if she gives nature a gift, it will come back to her, one way or another.

The idea for The Starfish didn't come about recently, he noted, adding that he always enjoyed spending storytime with his kids, cuddled up on a cold day or right before bed.

"When they were little, they always liked to do that - it was the bedtime ritual, and my daughter especially would bring a stack of five or six books, and she would always say 'I don't want that story, I want a different story.'"

Then finally, she would come up with a random idea, which Chambers would oblige by coming up with something related.

"One night, she said she wanted a story about a starfish. I realized it then - in my early 20s - that I was able to make things up on the fly, enough to satisfy her curiosity anyway," he said.

"I could make them up enough to satisfy (my kids) to get them to go to sleep. Then I thought to myself that I wanted to do that one day."

So he kept that idea with him through the years. He started his career, raised his family, and it was always in the back of his mind that he wanted to write.

"I always wrote, but I was a closet writer," he said, adding he would come up with ideas and stash them in his desk drawer, but never do anything with them.

Then one day in 2011, he decided to answer an ad for Laura Crowe's Imagine it in Writing, which is a collection of classes and workshops held in the area for both established and aspiring writers.

"It would happen at the library and sometimes in an author's home. Lots of local writers were there, and it was there that I got to start really writing."

One night, he brought in his idea for the starfish story, and the group really liked it. Then he ended up reading it at the Mountain View Arts Festival (MVAS) last summer, and got to work polishing up a final manuscript.

He noted that though there are many children's book publishers, they are inundated with story ideas, so he thought self-publishing seemed like the best option early on in the process.

During the MVAS, he ran into Archer, who was doing some of her suminagashi art at the library.

"It's so cool she was back there and this is kind of another way this happened," he said.

He went to the back of the library where she was working, and she asked if he wanted to give suminagashi a try.

"My first starfish looked quite awful actually," he laughed.

After discovering illustrating wasn't for him, he gave Archer an overview of the story and lent her the manuscript, hoping she would call him with word as to whether or not she would like to go ahead with the illustration of his book.

Instead, she just emailed him a finished page, he said.

"It was perfect - brilliant. The illustrations for the whole book were then created, simply from her reading my story. I didn't tell her how to do it, just how many pages we needed to do."

So over the next few months, he got the illustrations piece by piece, and when the time came to put portions of the story text on each page, it all laid out seamlessly, he noted.

Though he is also working on another project, he said he is currently focusing on marketing his book, which is available at AG Foods, Value Drug Mart, White Raven Emporium and Pharmasave in Didsbury and Carstairs.

It is also available online at (www.silverfeatherpress.com) and though he noted copies will be available at the bigger box stores in the future, they will have to wait for now.

Worst flooding in Alta.'s history

Sundre was among 27 Alberta communities in a local state of emergency at the height of what provincial officials are calling the worst flooding in Alberta's history.

By yesterday, the number of confirmed states of local emergency across the province dropped to 23, with 23 active local Emergency Operations Centres in southern Alberta, including municipalities, First Nations, and private industry (Fortis). Mountain View County and Sundre closed their centres Saturday.

"This disaster is entirely unique in its speed, its scale and its scope in the number of people and communities that it impacted. Our government fully recognizes that," said Premier Alison Redford on Sunday. "That's why, to date, we have brought together all provincial resources to respond to this disaster through the Alberta Emergency Management Agency. And today, we begin to rebuild."

Since Wednesday, June 19, a slow-moving intense low pressure system brought 80 to 280 millimetres of precipitation with localized amounts up to 340 millimetres along the mountains and foothills from Edson to Waterton Park, according to Alberta Environment officials.

The rain fell with very high intensity (approximately 20 millimetres per hour) over an unusually large area, which led to flash flood-type response in a number of locations.

Some areas received as much as 20 millimetres of rain per hour for 12 hours and the Red Deer River's flow rate surged to as high as 2,000 cubic metres per second at one point, while the river's height jumped by as much as 12 metres.

At least three people were confirmed to have died from the flooding across the province.

As of yesterday morning, portions of 12 highways remained closed, three ferries were not operating, and three sections of highway were open to emergency vehicles only.

Locally, portions of Highway 587 were closed over the weekend because of flooding concerns at Red Lodge and Garrington Bridge, but were reopened as of Sunday.

While officials watched the water levels on the Highway 27 bridge over the Red Deer River in Sundre, the road was never closed.

Water rose to just under a foot below the bridge deck at the height of flooding.

Tourism, Parks and Recreation staff have evacuated 675 people from 43 campgrounds and facilities, including partial evacuation of the Delta Lodge in Kananaskis Village.

They have participated in 17 aerial rescue operations to assist 108 people and provide supplies to others.

Tens of thousands of people from across the province were evacuated from flood-ravaged communities including Sundre, Drumheller, Canmore, and Calgary.

About 10,000 people from Medicine Hat were evacuated Saturday as most of those evacuated from Sundre were allowed to return home.

And in one of the hardest-hit communities - High River - officials were forced to evacuate the evacuation centres due to rising floodwaters.

Some areas of Red Deer, mainly campgrounds near the river, were evacuated.

Locally, flooding occurred on the Red Deer River, Little Red Deer River, Fallentimber Creek, and James River in Mountain View County, Sundre, Water Valley and Eagle Hill areas.

Construction theft

A DeWalt radio was stolen from a construction site on Deer Coulee Drive sometime between June 10 and 13, according to Cpl. Warren Wright.

The radio, which cost about $200, was stolen from a garage that contractors were working on and they claim that somebody came in overnight and swiped the radio, he noted.

Wright added that the name River Bend Welding was painted on the side of the radio, and is asking that if anybody comes across it, that they report it to the Didsbury RCMP.

the scene, he noted.

Anybody who knows anything further is encouraged to contact police, he added.

Rental fraud

Police became aware of a rental fraud attempt on Sunday, June 16, said Wright.

The call came in from the Calgary Police Service to a woman who owns a rental property in Calgary, he said.

It turns out there is an ad on Craigslist, advertising the house is for rent, and the poster is not the owner of the property, he noted.

This third party has tried to rent out her property, unbeknownst to her, and collect rent through a wire transfer to an account in the US, he said.

"Some people have showed up to look at the property without the actual owner knowing," said Wright, noting that when money crosses borders, unless it is a relatively large amount, it is hard to track the fraudsters down.

He urged residents be very cautious if they are planning on sending money across the border for any reason, especially when they have never met the receiver.

"A word of warning to the public when it comes to rental property and transferring money to another part of the country and US, is you need to scrutinize the transaction carefully."

Stolen flowerpots

One wire-style flowerpot and one grey flowerpot, both of which had pink flowers on them, were stolen from a residence on 21 Avenue and 15 Street overnight on Tuesday, June 18, said Wright.

Highway dispute

Police received reports that two drivers, a male in a black Ford one-ton truck, and a female in a blue Honda Civic, were fighting in what seemed to be a domestic altercation on Highway 582, two km west of Didsbury, said Wright.

A passerby reported the incident, which took place on Friday, June 14, around noon, and the complainant said it appeared the male was attacking the female, though by the time an officer was dispatched to investigate, both vehicles had left

DIDSBURY RC FUN FLYERS CLUB

Box 120 Didsbury, Alberta T0M 0W0

On Monday, July 1 the Didsbury R/C Fun Flyers model airplane club will be holding their 22nd Annual Canada Day Fun Fly at their club airfield northwest of Didsbury. The public is invited to attend from 12 noon until 4 p.m. Please follow the signs starting one block north of Westglen School to the airfield. Guest flyers from around southern Alberta will be flying a variety of miniature aircraft. Club members will be pleased to answer questions and discuss the various aspects of the hobby. During the afternoon a public address system will keep the spectators informed as to the various aircraft and stunts they are watching. There will be a concession on site for a light snack. We hope the public will bring their lawn chairs and join us for the afternoon.

Didsbury firefighters qualify for national competition

BY KEVIN VINK
MVP Staff

Both new recruits and veterans of the Didsbury fire department (DFD) tried their best to represent the town, as the DFD sent two teams to a qualifying round of FireFit in Brooks the weekend of June 15 and 16.

FireFit is a competition that tests firefighters' physical abilities in extreme conditions, explained Didsbury firefighter Craig Martin, who has been with the DFD for six years.

The firefighters entered into both the individual team and team relay competitions, and three - namely Craig Martin, Matt Code, and Jesse Derksen - qualified to go to the national competition being held in Edmonton in September, he said.

In order to qualify for nationals, the individual team competitors each had to run the entire course in a total time of under nine minutes, said Martin, and the team relay event had to be completed in one minute and 50 seconds, which they did as well.

"In order to qualify for the nationals, in the individual, out of your three team members your course times together had to be under nine minutes, so we had times of 2:21 2:24 and 2:26," said Martin.

"There were a couple penalties, but overall we scored a time of 7:24. Last year we scored 9:02, so we certainly cut away our time."

He added the first team the DFD sent was the same as last year, while the second team consisted of rookies who have recently signed on.

"We did really well. This year we also had the opportunity to train in the memorial complex - the town really helped us out there in the winter season," he said.

He explained that the course is made up of various tasks, which competitors have to do with a complete suit and breathing apparatus on, weighing about 40 pounds total.

He explained that the course is made up of various tasks, which competitors have to do with complete turn out gear and breathing apparatus on, weighing about 60 to 70-pounds total.

"They say that being on a breathing apparatus reduces you physically by about 20 per cent, just because your body is demanding air and you're restricted to the limitations of the (Self-Contained Breathing Apparatus)," he noted.

The first obstacle is to carry a 40 lb. hose pack up several flights of stairs six stories high - touching every step - then reach over the edge of the staircase and pull up a 50-pound weight attached to a rope, run back down the stairs - again touching every step or risking a penalty.

Once down the stairs, competitors do a mock forced entry, where they pound a cylinder that is under pressure with a sledgehammer - about 10 times - to release the spring.

They then sprint in a zig-zag pattern between obstacles, grab a charged 50-foot firehose, drag it out, and hit a target with water.

Then competitors drag a 175-pound dummy for a distance of 100 feet.

"And that's the last task. A lot of guys fall over at this point, and that's it," he said.

The teams were pitted against many other departments, including ones from Calgary and Edmonton, and there were even some teams coming from as far as Ontario.

"Some of these guys take the competition so seriously that they have a mock-up track that they can train on all year long, so it's a pretty heavy competition."

"We had a goal to qualify for the nationals, so we were thrilled when we hit it," he noted.

The trials, he said, are two minutes of pain.

"All you can think about is beating the guy beside you and finishing and representing your department," he said, adding that the announcers called the teams by their departments' names, rather than individuals' names.

Although he doesn't anticipate winning the nationals competition, he is still looking forward to it, simply because he has the chance to represent small-town Didsbury in the face of full-time big-city departments.

Jesse Derksen, who has been with the department for just under two years now, said "It's like nothing you've ever experienced before."

When he was doing it, he was just focusing on getting through and finishing the race, he said.

"It's absolutely exhausting going through it. Like, you just have to conquer everything that's holding you back and just pull through it and get it done."

He said he's looking forward to training even harder as the nationals get closer, and is also looking forward to the next qualifying round in Edson, which the DFD will compete in again, just to keep them fresh.

Matt Code, who has also been with the DFD for two years, said "It's an absolutely fantastic event. It's a fierce competition, but it's a brotherhood competition."

"You want to win, but everybody's just showing their full support. If you're struggling, everyone's cheering you on. It's a different style of competition than most people get familiar with," he noted.

He got much better results than he did last year, he added, noting that he shaved 34 seconds off his time compared to last year.

"It was really tough. You don't really notice it until the very end when you do the dummy drag. All your quads tighten up and as soon as they do, you can hardly walk - I thought I was gonna fall over."

Despite the pain, the team is looking forward to the nationals, he said, noting that they were drawn as a wild card for last year's competition, but it was in Montreal, so they decided not to go.

Kevin Vink/MVP Staff

ROSENKE

Dale Arthur Rosenke, 63, of Olds, Alberta passed away after a hard fought battle with cancer on June 20, 2013. Dale was the first born to Harry and Patricia Rosenke of Didsbury, Alberta.

Dale is survived by his two children Jean Kinnear (Kris) and Greg (Monika) and their mother Charlotte, his five grandchildren Laila, Karis, and Reece Kinnear; Maiya and Grayson; sisters Linda Olsen (Jim) and Joanne Schwass (Jim); brothers Lloyd (Janet) and David (Janine); his long time friend Janet Hutton and his many nieces, nephews, aunts, uncles, cousins and other family and friends. Dale was predeceased by his father Harry and his mother Patricia and his granddaughter Eliza. Dale bred and showed Clydesdale Horses for over 40 years. He had one of the largest Clydesdale operations in Western Canada. Highlights of his Clydesdale career was breeding and showing a Grand Champion Stallion and Reserve Champion mare at the Royal Winter Fair in Toronto, Ontario. He was a long time member of the Canadian and Alberta Clydesdale Associations.

Dale enjoyed fixing things and aimed to be self-sufficient on his Westerdale farm. He had a love of the farm and the land. He was always surrounded by animals, family and loved his little grandchildren. No matter what had to be done, he always had time to take the kids to collect the eggs, feed a pail bunter or pet the latest foal. Dale would always look forward to spring when there would be a new crop of foals on the ground.

A memorial service to celebrate Dale's life will be held at the Olds First Baptist Church on June 28, 2013 at 2:00 PM. In lieu of donations, please take the time to enjoy the outdoors and spend a day with your own loving family members. IN LOVING MEMORY OF
WHO PASSED AWAY
JUNE 26, 2006

If I had all the world to give,
I'd give it, yes, and more,
To hear his voice, see his smile,
And greet him at the door,
But all I can do, dear Alex
Is go and tend your grave,
And leave behind tokens of love
To the best husband God made
I like to think when life is done,
Wherever heaven may be,
He'll be standing at the door
Up there to welcome me.
Your loving wife Cathie

In loving memory of Alex Hunter
Who passed away June 26, 2006

Remembering you is easy
We do it every day.
Missing you is the hardest part
As it never goes away.
To hear your voice,
To see your smile,
To sit with you
and talk for awhile,
Would be our greatest wish.
Today, tomorrow,
our whole life through,
We shall always love and remember you.

Love
